To all SAGE Farmers Market Stall Holders

Inaugural SAGE Farmers Market XI vs Rest of the World Cricket Showdown

The rain and the river got the better of us this summer, so the cricket match has been postponed indefinitely. We'll keep you informed of developments.

Social Impact Study

As previously mentioned, the University of Canberra will be conducting a social impact study of the market sometime this year (soon, I hope). I have provided Emma Palandri with contact details for most of our regular stall holders, so when she contacts you, I hope you will be generous with your time.

SAGE Farmers e-Market

The e-market has launched publicly!! We've had a strong start in our first week and I hope it will only continue to grow from here.

The opportunity now exists for you to take advantage of the e-market and get your products online. This is open to all stall holders at our market, so if you want to join in, let me know and we'll talk about how to get you started.

The e-market will run every week now, so you can come on board anytime. Have a serious think about it. We have big plans for this enterprise and hope to see your businesses grow as a result.

Rule Changes

Please see the attached draft rule changes relating to the sale of seafood at the market and also the introduction of penalties for stall holders who fail to notify me when they can't attend. These rules will be formally adopted shortly, so if you wish to discuss them, please get in touch as soon as possible. You can talk to any of the committee members, or email markets@sageproject.org.au if that's easier.

That's it for now.
